Scott Eblin is president of The Eblin Group, a leadership development firm committed to helping clients lead at their best and live at their best. As a leadership expert, global speaker, best-selling author, and executive coach, Scott works with some of the best-known companies and organizations in the world.

Scott works with executives who want to lead and live at their best in a constantly changing world. He does this by confronting head-on the reality of today's 24/7 environment and helping clients create repeatable actions that lead to positive outcomes. He advocates simple, practical and immediately applicable steps that help leaders consistently be at their best – not just in their professional lives, but also at home and in their communities.

Scott's work and experience is captured in two best-selling books: The Next Level: What Insiders Know About Executive Success and Overworked and Overwhelmed: The Mindfulness Alternative. Now in its 3rd edition, Business Book Review calls The Next Level a "fascinating read" that "is full of potentially career-saving advice." Overworked and Overwhelmed was named one of the ten best business books of 2014 by The Globe and Mail.

Scott is an honors graduate of Davidson College and holds a master's degree in public administration from Harvard University. He has a certificate in leadership coaching from Georgetown University and was a 10-year faculty member of that program. Scott's work as a coach is grounded in 15 years of managerial and executive leadership experience in the private, public and non-profit sectors.
